confrontation

Andover was our school. We accepted it and yet many of us wanted to change it. Our housemasters and teachers often appeared to be on our side. Yet when the Faculty voted as a group, we always seemed to get shot down. Could you blame them? Some of them had been here before our Fathers entered Prep School. The Co-op failed. People began to get cynical about their chances of affecting a change. You could feel it. No one cared anymore. We're leaving quite happy, yet just a little bit ashamed about what we might have changed and didn't.

Come on people
come on children
come on down to the glory river gonna wash you up gonna wash you down
gonna lay the devil down
Come on people
come on children
there's a king at the glory river and the precious king
he loved the people to sing
babes in the blinkin sun sang we shall overcome
come on people sons and mothers
keep the dream
and ride the dove
we could build the dream with love
I got fury in my soul
fury's gonna take me to the glory goal in my mind I can't study war no more save the people
save the children
save the country

This book is dedicated to our class. We have proven ourselves both strong and united. It is our hope that our associations here, both student and faculty, have helped us to find a direction in which to aim our lives.

Mr. Hawes has really been a jack-of all trades. He came to Andover for a P.G. year, then went to Harvard. Then he returned to teach Latin and soon switched to English. Then he was off to an aircraft carrier in the Pacific for four years before settling down at PA. He coached track, sat at Discipline Committee meetings and was even head of the social functions Committee for a while. John Hawes spent thirty six years here giving his boys their "meat and potatoes". We will remember his intelligence, his wit, and his friendliness.

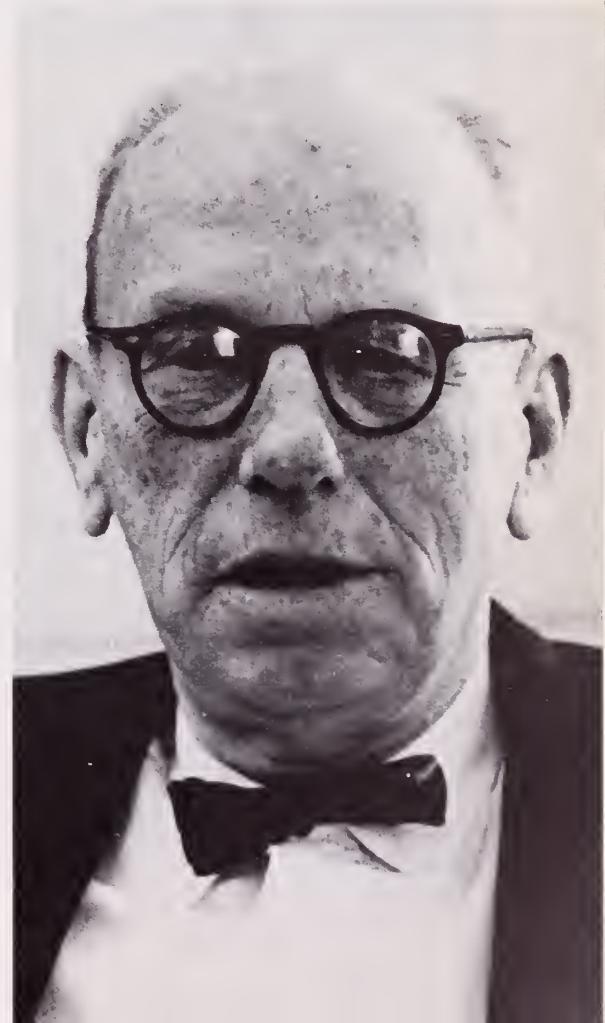

Francis McCarthy leaves after twenty-eight years. He did a lot for Andover. He pioneered the Summer Session, taught both English and Philosophy, even reviewed poetry for the New York Times and the Saturday Review. He enjoys teaching a lot, he says, and will continue to do so next year. He was a very friendly person, and he liked it here.

It is hard to believe Chester Cochran will no longer be teaching at Andover. A fine example of the old style "Bachelor Housemaster", Chet refused to give up those duties until his ill health forced him to do so last winter. In addition to chairing the Prize Committee, Mr. Cochran taught French, bringing to the classroom his innumerable experiences in France besides his technical skill. He has become a tradition here. It will be strange not to see him on the paths every day. It is with great regret that we must publish without a picture of Mr. Cochran.

Mr. Giersch was born and raised in the Boston area, graduating from Harvard in 1929. After college he taught at both Middlesex and Harvard, and in 1941 came to Andover. For those twenty-nine years "Wally" not only taught English but chaired many committees of importance—The Faculty Housing Committee in 1960 among them. His students called him strict, a hard marker—but Mr. Giersch taught, taught hard, and taught well. He will now retire to California with his wife.

Known as just an incredibly friendly guy, "Spike" Adriance served Andover for thirty six years. He began as an Assistant Dean, taught Bible, was the Admissions director, and was on nearly every development and alumni committee there was. He seemed to be everybody's friend—we can all remember at least one low winters day when his hearty hellos raised our spirits a little. He was a part of PA the students should have seen more of. I feel safe in saying we all miss him. How can you replace a man like Mr. Adriance?

Len James retires this year as longstanding chairman of the History Department. Author of several books, founder of lacrosse here at PA, Len's achievements are too numerous to list completely here. He was one of those rare teachers who could really fire up a class. Intolerant of students expounding without the facts to back them up, he repeatedly challenged his classes until they soon developed the knack to argue their points eloquently and with factual evidence. Probably never accused of running a boring class, Len always searched for points of particular interest to his students, stated his opinion on it, dared anyone to challenge him (someone always did) and the debate was on! The Quotations from Chairman Lenny will be an eternal reminder of his wit, wisdom and charm.

We were back, the campus was beautiful those first few days. Appropriate, for we had been waiting four years, some of us, to lead the school. It was hard to believe many of us were giving speeches to the preps instead of listening intently as we had just a few years before. Our day had come, yet it wasn't quite what we'd hoped it would be. Being varsity football, head of a publication, or a house president didn't satisfy us any more. Many of our dreams had been realized and yet we wanted much more. A peace of mind that was difficult to discover in the Andover Environment.

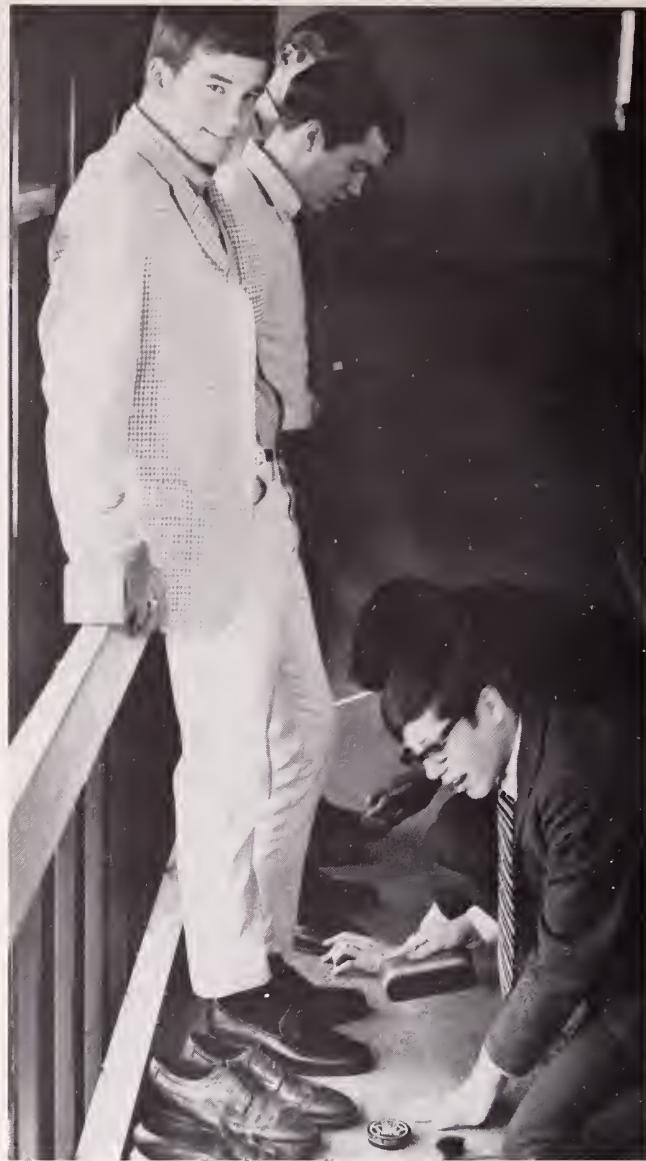

At the start of our senior trip
We wielded a bloody whip
But grease we then smeared with glee
Two hundred happy preps were free

Above all everything was the same, the good and the bad. It was like a continuation of upper year, except we led instead of followed. The "glory of senior year" was a myth.

We'd heard about college pressure. Now we found out what it was . . ." 'A' ratings have been known to deteriorate," and "those of you in the bottom half of the class" seemed to reverberate all over the campus.

But despite the pressure
we managed to steal more than a few moments to have fun.

will do SOMETHING about Oct 15

The fifteenth arrived, hesitantly, and we could all see the problems confronting Charlie Wyman and the other organizers.

To a great many the Moratorium was clouded by the conflict between the students and faculty. Too many were accused of an apparently widespread apathy.

Isolation was another problem, not only manifested on the fifteenth but throughout the year. We all agreed that Andover wasn't real. But who could tell the difference? Very few of us knew what the real world was like.

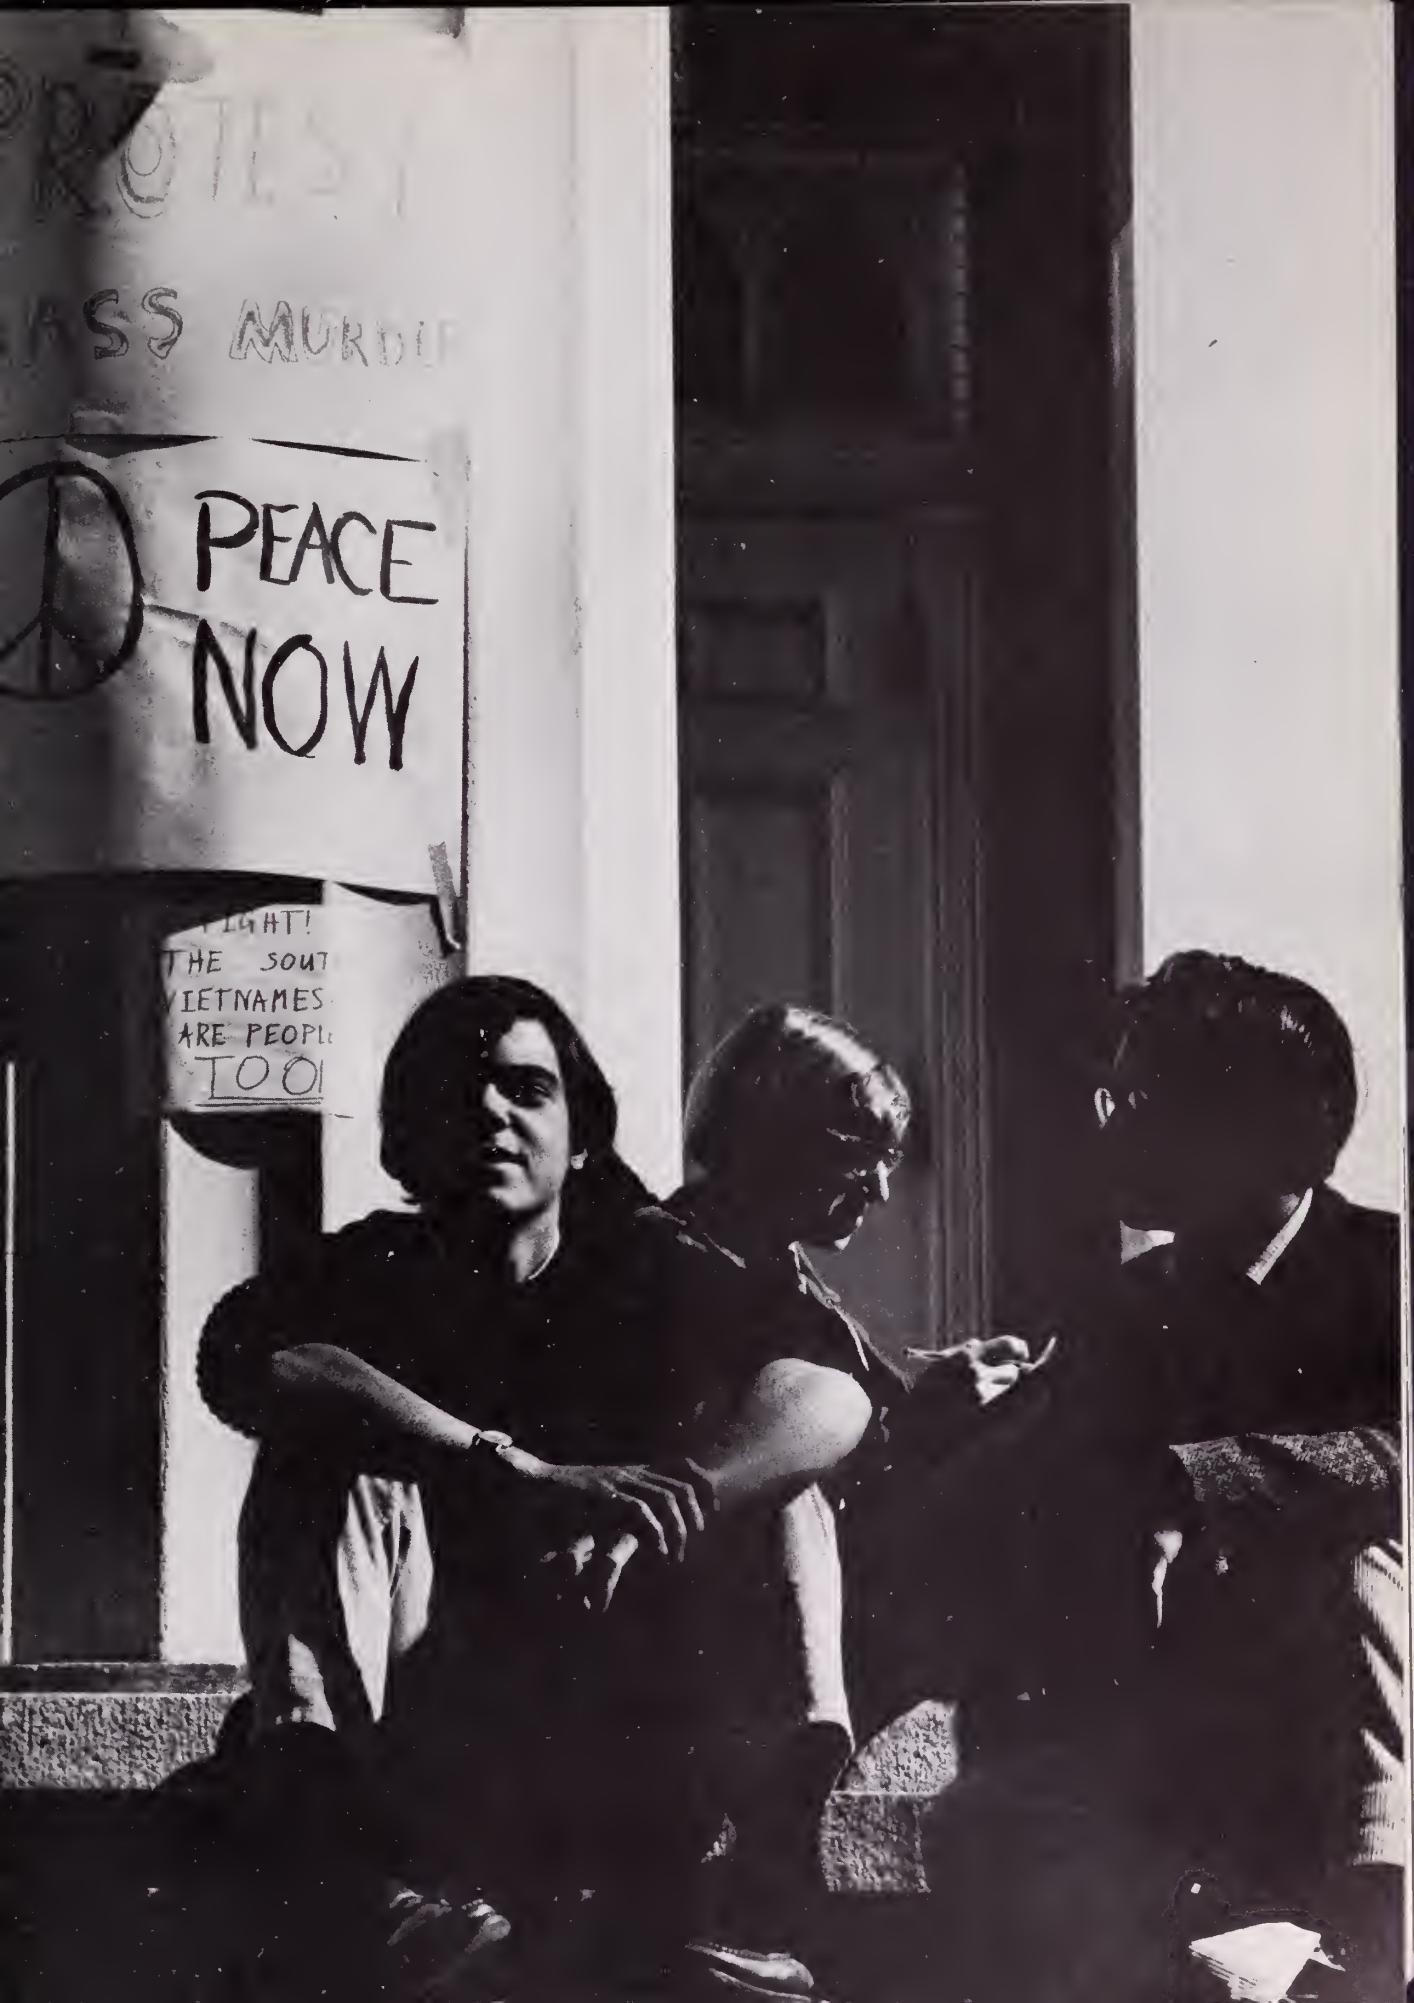

Mostly we had questions, as Charlie said, "We felt a common goal, though the means and even the end might be confused and confusing. There was a spirit, to be sure, but it manifested itself differently in each of us. Maybe that's good. Maybe that's the way things should be. But . . ."

Freddie Peters without his socks.
Freddie Peters the school he mocks?

Freddie Peters, girl in his room.
Freddie Peters won't you please learn soon.

Freddie Peters without his shoes.
Freddie Peters knows no rules.
Let's show Freddie he's not on vacation.
Let's put Freddie on probation.

Protest, protest, it's unfair.
As if such things here are so rare.
The Faculty will listen, listen.
Meanwhile it's just Fred that's missin'.

Precedent, precedent.
The spirit of the rules they say,
Probation's good for you, OK.

New Ideals

There continues to be something wrong at Andover. A large segment of the student body still considers itself unhappy. Students who blame the rules alone for this unhappiness fail to grasp the extent of the problem. While a less stringent rule system would certainly make one's stay at Andover more comfortable, it would do little to relieve the unhappiness.

Unfortunately, problems at PA will not be resolved until the traditions which this school has held are accepted anew or rejected by the community. In short, Andover suffers from an ill common to America today: faith in traditional ideals are dying. Education means little to students who have no goals in life. It is impossible to instill religion in students whose only view of God is either non-existent or so abstract as to be irrelevant. Work is senseless where there is no desire to achieve.

What we need now are new ideals.

The Phillipian talked of new ideals, yet it offered no solutions. Some went to the trees one weekend. It was an escape. But they had to come back on Sunday, just like everyone else.

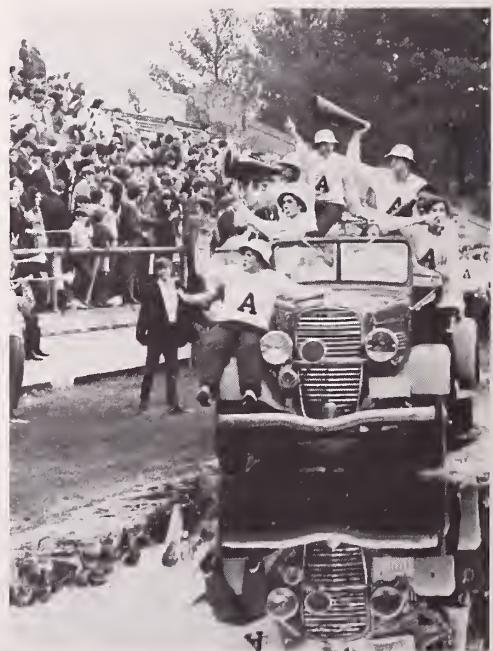

The Co-op was a failure. It took us most of the fall to realize. It was a forum for people, both students and faculty, who liked to hear themselves talk, to let off steam. Mr. Richards pinpointed it when he announced the Co-op had not sent one single proposal to the faculty all fall.

Coach Sorota had been waiting since lower year for us. We did not disappoint him. Reversing '68's disastrous two win season, '69 football won all but two, losing them by a total of eight points. Old hands Perkins, Leone, and Sorota combined with preps Lentz and Snickenberger in the backfield. Preps Hughes and Hepburn anchored the line, ably backed by Sam Walker and Jim Garrett in the secondary. It was a fulfilling season, ending in the 27-0 explosion up at Exeter . . . .

Yet somehow we felt we could have won them all.

In winter, every mile is two.

It was cold and dark and people seemed to lose whatever enthusiasm they'd had and we wanted nothing more than to get the hell out. The 1970 version of winter term was no different from any other.

The "Masked Man" arrived on the scene and for a split second people began to get excited about the Co-op.

Coffin made his annual visit and suddenly people stopped to listen. Miraculously, more than a handful of faculty members appeared in chapel that Sunday.

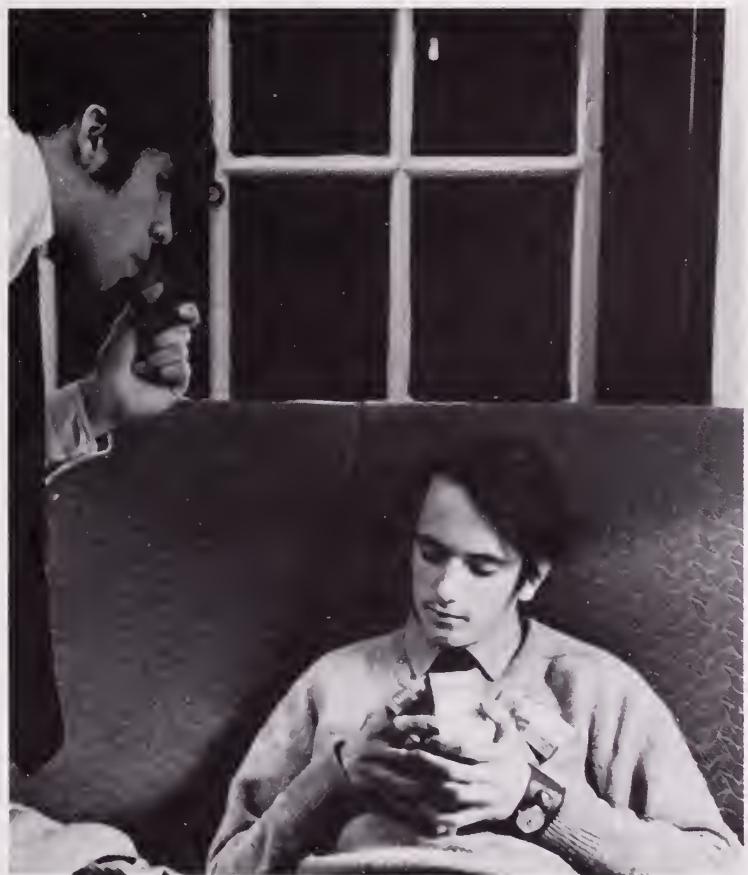

If the Andover Senior class of 1970 would dedicate itself to solving the social needs of this country, it would be the greatest single asset this country's ever had.

William Sloane Coffin
Stimson House
February, 1970

Winter term was a "holding operation." We'd already made our place in the school. All we wanted was to hold onto what we had, not get kicked out, receive that letter that would make it all worthwhile in April.

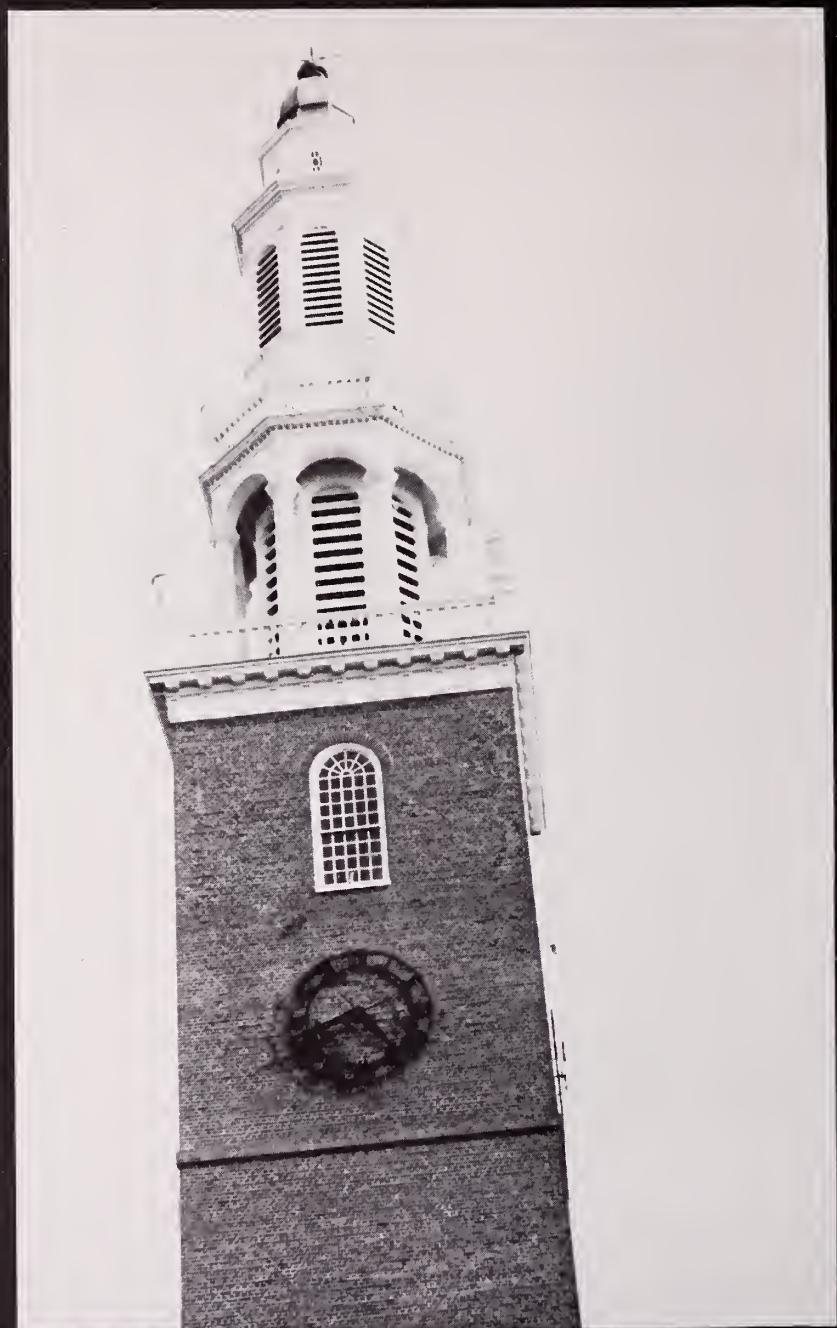

The ringing of the bells, bells, bells, bells, bells, bells, bells.

E. A. Poe

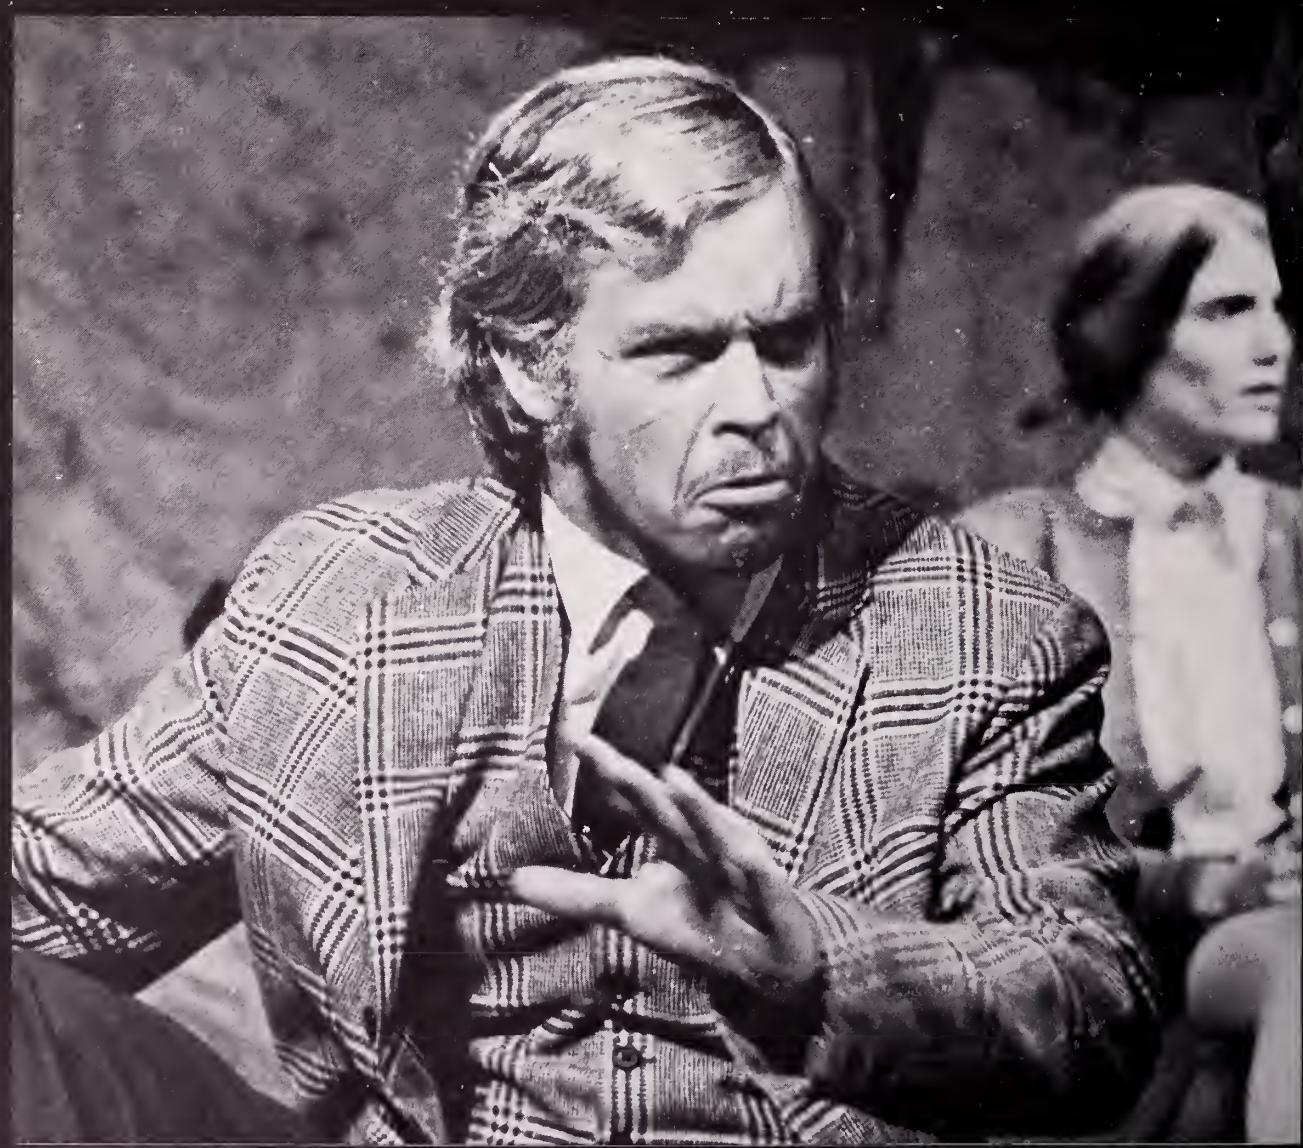

Yet we still had our friends. We'd all gotten to know at least a few people well and even though things weren't always pleasant, at least we were all going through it together.

black comedy

We were proud. We'd proved we could eat the worst food this side of boot camp, and survive.

Never has gossip traveled so fast in any one place at any one time.

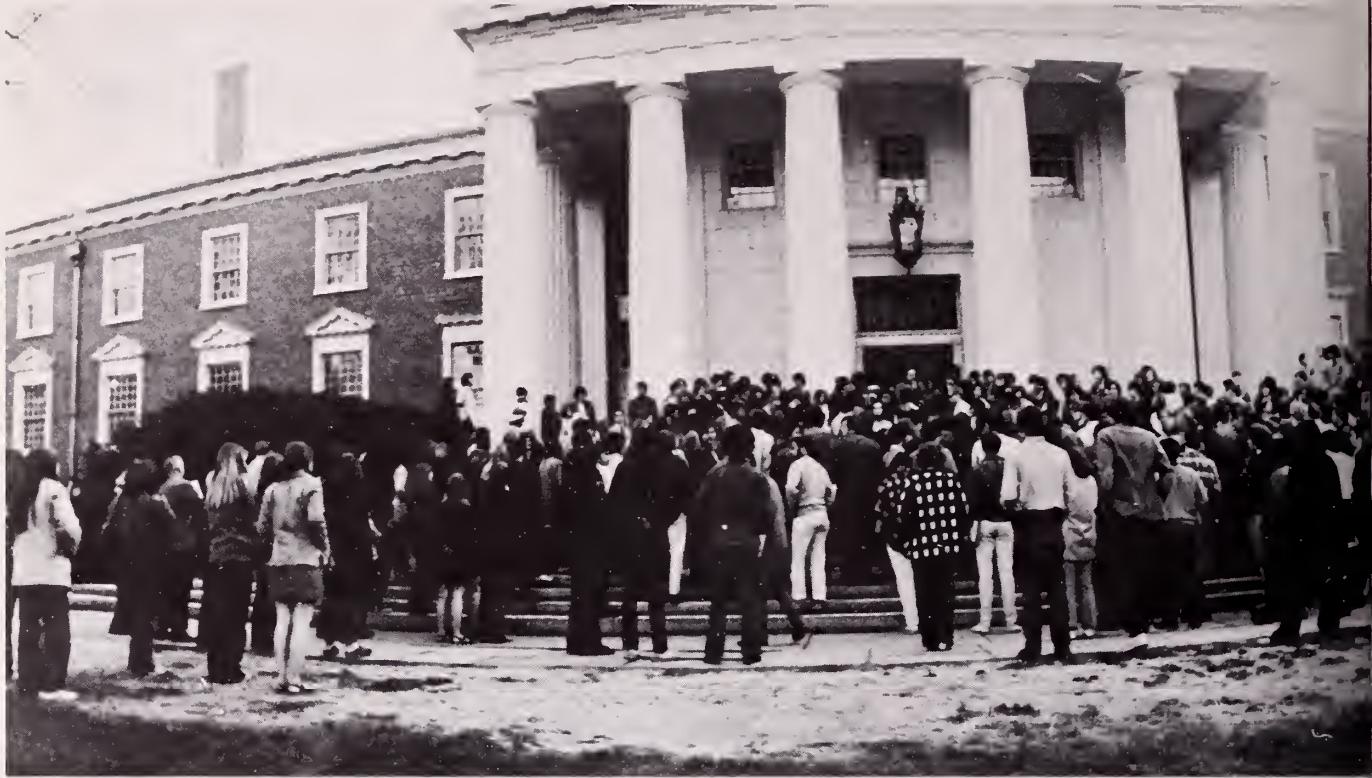

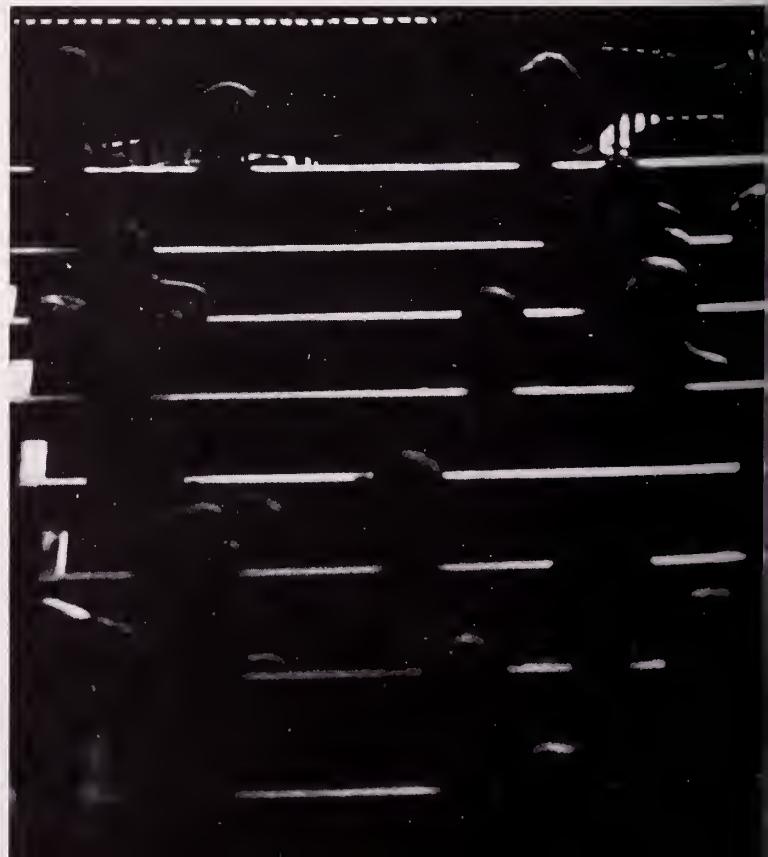

why?

Suddenly one day there were whispers about an article in a national magazine about good old PA. Unlike most, these whisperers seemed to know what they were talking about. Everyone eagerly grabbed copies of Look. Some agreed, many were angry. It was hard to read something like that about your own school.

First and foremost among student organizations in terms of sleep lost (the Pot Pourri is second), is the Phillipian. Not only covering the mundane everyday affairs of the school, the Phillipian served this year as a mouthpiece for student opinion to be aired throughout the far-reaching Phillips Academy community. For an alumnus used to the Alumni Bulletin or a parent used to speeches on "Andover Today", the Phillipian was often their only way of finding out what was really going on here. As they said in their last issue,

"If the Phillipian were our only memories of Andover we would definitely consider it a rewarding experience."

College. It was a dirty word to some and beautiful to others. But finally we knew. There were a lot of smiles that day despite the rain. In a year rougher than most nationally we'd done very well. Most were proud, some felt like failures, some didn't give a damn. But now it was over.

Jock: What did I do this morning? Slept 'til 10, got up with Nutrament and a shower, played stickball 'til lunch. The free time is great.

Freak: God, I'm so wrecked. I was up all night working for the strike.

Zero: What did you do all night?

Freak: Well . . . uh, mostly we just rapped and decided what policies we would institute today.

Zero: What policies have you instituted?

Freak: We decided to stay away from classes. The Strike Committee is engaged in the continuing search to discover some sort of relevance and meaning in the so-called "education" the establishment is force feeding us here.

Jock: The trouble is that everyone on the strike Committee has long hair.

It's a clique and they don't listen to anyone outside.

Freak: I don't think it's clique. We just happen to be the only ones who really feel something when we hear about those dying thousands of miles away.

Zero: Don't you really mean you're the only ones smart enough to realize that we're the ones who'll be dying in just a few years?

Jock: You never told us what you've been doing?

Zero: I managed to go to every seminar and class but one. Anyway, I didn't catch much running between seminars, but at least I was there, that's the important thing.

Jock: I'm not going to be brainwashed by anything more the committee jams down our throats. Anyway, the Sox are playing on channel 47 tonight.

Freak: We're going to lead this movement whether anyone likes it or not. I've seen stupid jocks control this school for 4 years and I won't put up with it anymore!

Zero: Are study hours in effect tonight?

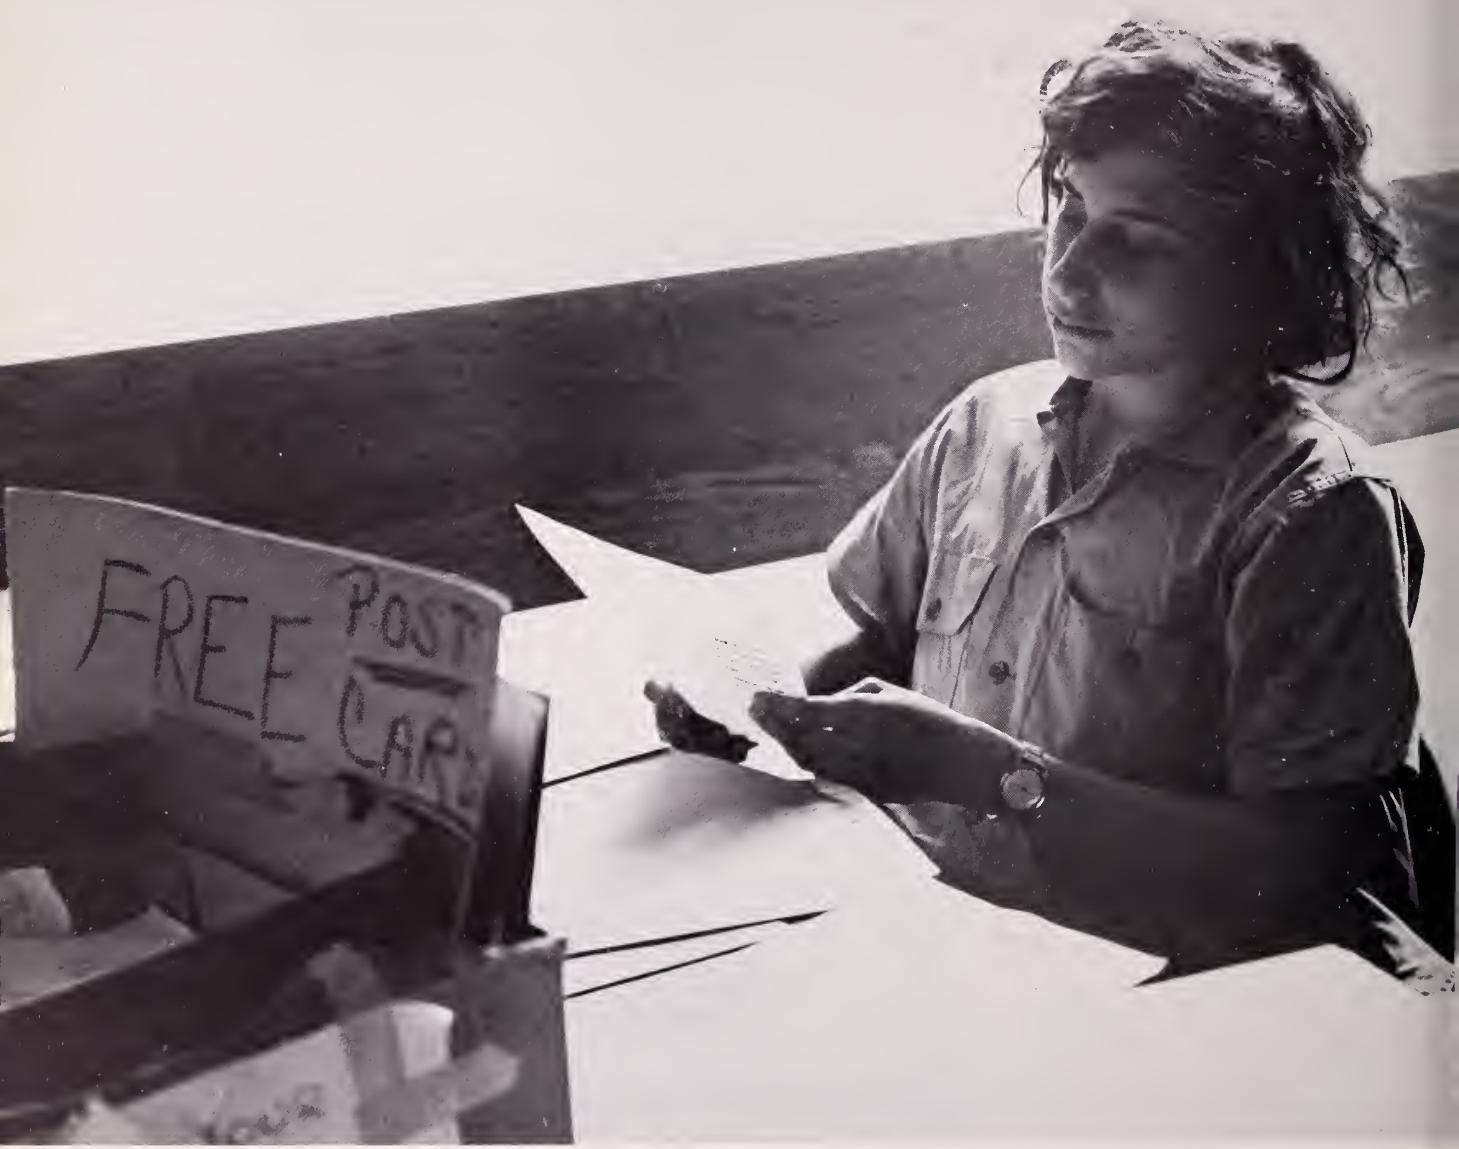

Jock: I admire Mr. Kemper for making classes voluntary today. That's one of the strongest moves he's made while I've been here.

Freak: Look man, If he hadn't made that move, we would've burned the place down within an hour.

Zero: I heard a couple of guys got demerits for standing on the grass listening to a student speak.

Jock: I heard a couple of mustachioed fellows from Harvard came up and started this whole strike business.

Zero: Why does it take a couple of guys from Harvard with a lot of revolutionary talk for students here to get up the nerve to do what students everywhere else have been doing for several days now?

Freak: Because you get conditioned to the system. Above all, there is that creeping fear that any faculty member who wants to can screw you for college.

Jock: I still say it's no fair forcing a disruption of the educational process.

Freak: Isn't education more than just classroom learning? Don't try to kid me, I've seen you sleeping through classes just like me.

Jock: Can't you be happy about anything? Pretty soon we'll have the vote. Things are getting better all the time.

Freak: Do you really believe that?

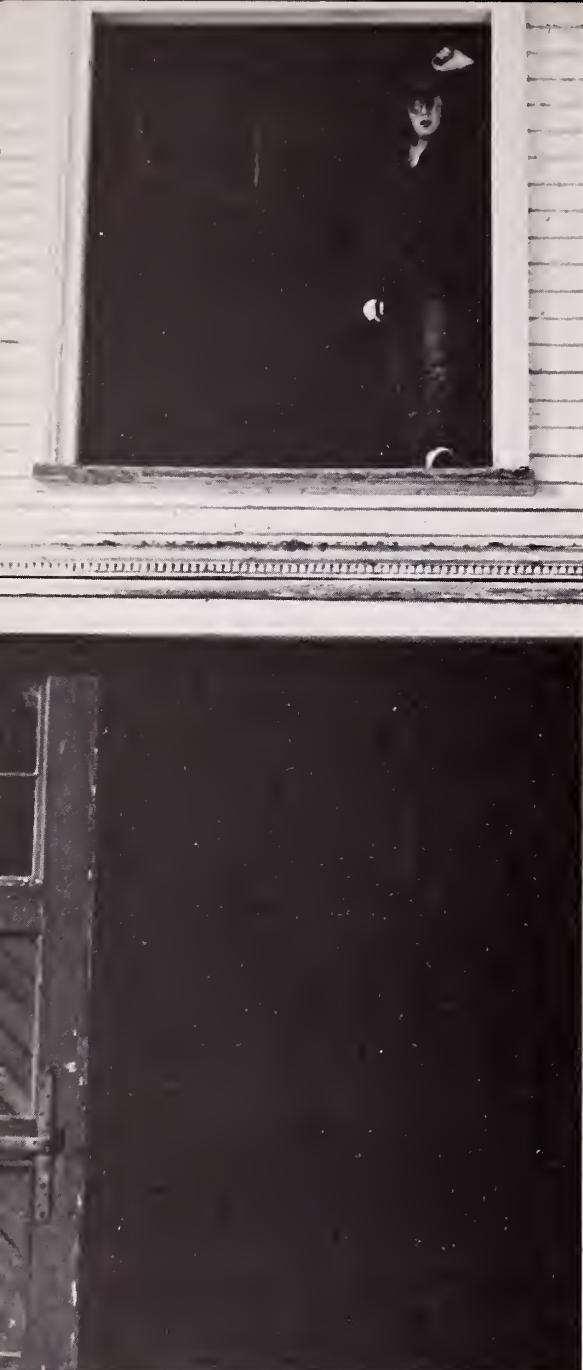

Zero: What are you doing tonight? I'm going to the wing to catch up on my notes.

Freak: I'm going to smoke up cause that's the only way I can face life here anymore. I'm going to have to pull an all-nighter. We have a hell of a lot to do. Strike!

Jock: Well no, I want to catch at least a couple of innings of the Sox. Nothing beats "Baseball and Ballantine".

Freak: I'm splitting.

Zero: I'm going back to my dorm. The bells are ringing.

Don Snyder, as our Pot Pourri Faculty advisor was, first and foremost, a friend. Too kind to get on our backs, he was instead there whenever we needed an ear, sympathetic or otherwise. He was and will be on our side, and his greatest responsibility was to himself. To the photographers and other oddities who knew him he was a very bright spot in a very stifling, often frustrating place.

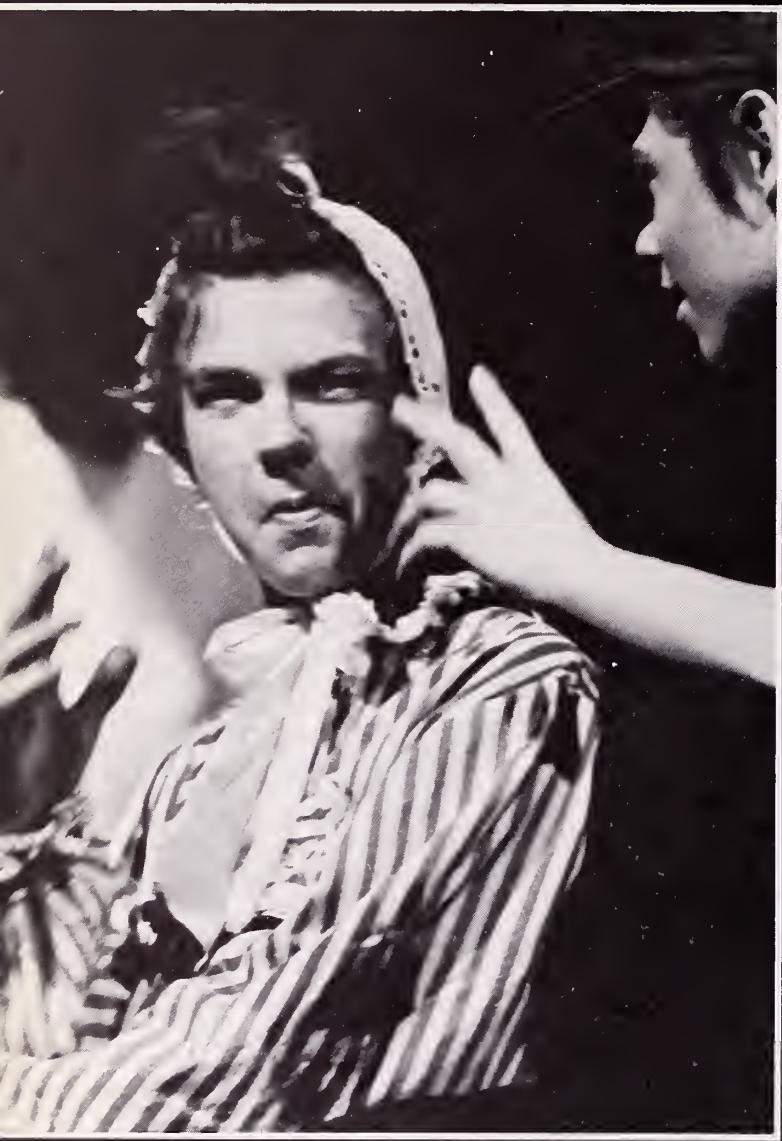

The Prom, 1970 style, arrived and made some of us happy. For many it was a chance to split and refresh yourself for that last drag to graduation.

CARNIVAL

The final week was strange. Though maybe we weren't wild about PA, the place had become a part of us. There was a certain security in being a Senior, and soon we'd lose it.

One couldn't help thinking of the quote "Look now, for when you look again, all this will not be yours."

the time has come today

friday, june 12

I used to get mad at my school Teachers who taught me weren't cool
You're holding me down, turning me round
Filling me up with your rules
I have to admit it's getting better Getting better since you've been mine

Collected in Andover, Mass. are 875 of the brightest students and 100 of the most brilliant faculty members in the country. But somehow it doesn't quite work. The "Andover Experience" was stifling to some and fulfilling to others. It is hard to believe we are leaving for good. Some will want to relive "the Experience" the rest of their lives. Others will remember only the housemasters that spent the year trying to catch them breaking rules or a system of requirements and exams that tended to discourage rather than encourage genuine interest. But we all agree that there is something missing here, a feeling of a community working together, instead of against itself. Many have said Andover must change to survive even the 20th Century. The potential is staggering.

One undistinguished Wednesday we opened our Phillipians to find that our prospective coordinators down the street had decided we fitted, all of us, into three distinct categories. Decide for yourself, now, cause if you don't fit into one of the three categories, you can't have gone to Andover were you a jock?
Ed. Note—When in doubt, call yourself a zero.

a freak?

The following, the Senior Section, is disorganized. There is alphabetical order for the most part, but you may find you have to search for your name and the masterpieces that some of you bothered to hand in. We tried to write on some of you, but many were left with just a name and address. Some of you wanted it that way. We hope that, in the writing, a few of you will find something, a mood, an idea that will help remind you of several long years at PA that meant many different things to many people.

Laddie was a very friendly guy for four years. He fit in well with various elements of the class but best of all the Stearns house crowd. It's quite possible that Laddie spent more time asleep, in and out of bed, than anyone in class.

STANFORD BISHOP S. 8
Grant made a significant place for himself at PA, as much through his goodnatured buffoonerie, as through his captaincy of the tennis team. He was interested in a great deal more than he was given credit for and should, through perseverance and good nature, be a continuing success at Stanford.

Frank was a truly funny person, besides being one of the friendliest and genuinely well liked people in the class. He earned the respect of the majority of the class, which elected him permanent VP. As Phillipian Sports editor and sometime editorialist he caused many a chuckle with his amusing articles. He was a really excellent person and will be well remembered by us all.

Paul spent three years at school, leaving for Lower year in Yugoslavia and coming back Upper year as a different brand of P.H.D. Extremely intelligent, he often appeared to know more than his teachers about some things. He was a kindly person and did a great deal for moratorium and even more for the strike, organizing and talking with everyone, trying to elicit support. Paul was well liked and almost universally respected by the class.

Possesor of perhaps the quickest wit in the class, Mark never had a problem in terms of natural talent, but only sometimes in the application of it. When Mark really wanted something, though, there was no stopping him, providing he could rouse himself out of bed. He played two years of JV lacrosse and joined Smyke and Donner to make a "Benchwarmers" Club Supreme on Varsity his Senior year. Mark had "friends" though, on the Mt. Hermon team, who "eliminated" Ethan Warren and soon Mark was number 5 attackman. The law of "omerta" prohibits me from expounding, except to say that Mark's family must be losing influence as the Exeter branch of the New Hampshire family "eliminated" Mark in the last second of the last game. Mark also held the masochistic position of Charities Drive Head. Always considered a "cool guy", Mark got to know a lot more people his last two years, his perceptive view always adding much to the everyday routine.

The highlight of Bill's 4 years was his Washington Internship of Upper Year Spring term. Bill unfortunately suffered from an inferiority complex which he compensated for in some unfortunate ways. Bill was an object of the insensitivity that is rampant among the Andover "in set". Bill's experience must be called a success, however, as he made Princeton, always a dream for him.

Peyton in his quiet way was one of the most intelligent members of the class. He gobbled up books at the rate of 2 or 3 a week. After a Junior year of adjustment and Lower year in France, he returned as an Upper, a more mature and friendly person. He proctered in Greene House, enjoying the solitude. His independence is perhaps his most outstanding characteristic.

Will devoted a large measure of his time to being President of the Phillipian. Hoping to join brother Denny at Harvard, Will unfortunately disproved the theory that being President of the newspaper is an automatic in to the Vard. Hidden behind his simple humor was one of the better minds in the class, as evidenced by his Phillipian editorials, which put into words how many of us felt about the school. He was not really a freak, and certainly not a jock. He was always an interesting person.

Possessor of a quick mind, Jimmy pushed himself to overcome his lack of size in athletics to the point where he won the Schubert Key as Andover's finest athlete. Captain of the lacrosse and basketball teams, Jim was the leading scorer in lax and he held the basketball team together through a long winter. Deke called him "the finest clutch performer I've ever seen" and that about sums it up. He was also head of the Phillips' Society, on the Honor roll many times, and the recipient of too many prizes to mention here. Jim was probably the most all around person in the class, and although many were not his friend, he was universally respected.

I've tried hard to keep my head and I love to think I've done so, but I'm never sure. So, after four long years, about one quarter of my conscious life, I'm happy and a little apprehensive, but not too. It's impossible to catalogue a million memories and ideas, so they are very special as they come, and only then. A few very bad thoughts: Goodyear and a dusty, rusty structure. A few very good ones: Ted, David, Harry, Alex, Snyds and others who I'll care about. I just hope that in twenty years, or forty, or longer, or maybe much shorter, that I can still say I'm glad to be alive, because I am.

Mark began his career at PA as an aspiring politico, his efforts culminating in the Junior Class presidency. He soon channeled his energy down the oneway path of journalism and reached the rewarding, if tiring position of Phillipian Managing Editor. He was smiling (kind of a wholesome grin) more often than not, and, but for a smoking problem he developed his senior year, Mark was a first class Andover man.

 Probably these comments will seem foolish in five years time. I've read some of my fellow classmate's comments, and already seem foolish, but, I suppose it is better than an empty space beneath your picture. Andover's Senior Class, in contrast to previous classes, is not a happy class. I think that that fact is of the utmost significance. Hopefully, others with greater influence than I will come to realize this change in spirit very soon. Hopefully, this passage will seem foolish and unnecessary in five year's time.

"Wacker's" main interest at PA lay in photography. Picking it up as a Lower, Ned was Photography Editor of the Phillipian in his Upper year, and senior year he developed a definite creative bent until he become one of the very best photographers in the school. Despite a sometime impatience with people, Ned developed a small group of very close friends here. Always good-natured about the often unlimited amount of gas he took, Ned could dish it out just as well as take it. Despite a relatively tough humor (in appearance), Ned was also deeply sensitive and often quite perceptive. Going out West (as he always wanted to do) to Denver next year, Ned will certainly make a place for himself.

I realize that when I look back at what I have written here I will be disgusted by my sentimentality; but despite that I hope in a few words to say that my three years here have been for me. To start I am an optimist and no matter how things have been going I have been happy. Perhaps I am one of the few here who can truly say that. I could list the activities I have been involved in but these have not been the most important things to me. People have been. Whether it has been the close unity of the ski team, the friendship of my dorm mates, or the relationship I shared with Nancy; these are the things I will miss the most.

would you buy a used car from the editor?

Used to be a yearbook was just a bunch of guys standing around for group pictures.

A yearbook records the events of a year, but it should also convey that intangible thing called mood, and that's what this book, part of the evolution in yearbook format, has tried to accomplish.

No two peoples' experiences are exactly the same, but I hope everyone can identify in some way with at least some part of this Pot Pourri.

We are publishing it for us, the class of '70, and not for, or to please, anyone else. We have tried to record things as they were, not as they should have been. For this book is what we will turn back to when time has warped our memory, to remind us of how we felt in 1970.

My thanks to Kip, who is as responsible for this book as I am.

Goodnight.

A guy who helped our class a lot was Dr. Kaiser. The good doctor. He said he came here and within a term realized how great the place could have been . . . He was so much like us, his ideas, his hopes, his anger. The one thing he liked most about P.A. was the kids. And he saved so many of us. But the school, well the school fenced him in. So the Doctor left.
